Foxit PDF SDK DLL

PDF Toolkit for .NET is a .NET application SDK DLL library for building tools and applications for Microsoft® Windows, which enables you to rapidly develop products using PDF technology. The library allows software developers to: Create, verify, manipulate, and print Microsoft® PDF files. Modify the appearance of Microsoft® PDF files. Sign and decrypt PDF files. Add PDF files to virtual folders and items. Write byte-by-byte to a stream for Microsoft® PDF files. The PDF Toolkit for .NET library is a thin layer over the OpenPDF library for .NET, the core library for reading and writing Microsoft® PDF documents. The PDF SDK DLL library provides a set of components that allow you to interact with Microsoft® PDF documents to perform detailed operations. What would you like to do today? Is there a way to get the 'grep' function of Google (GSuite) into StackOverflow? For example, to find information about a specific ticket that matches the ticket number, name of the ticket, description of the ticket and so forth. If you know how to do it, I would be happy for a link to documentation or an example on how to integrate with .Net (C#) or Python, but other languages are ok too. The benefits I see: I would like to show relevant information on the current problems the user is having (like the ticket number for the problem). That way, he can decide if he wants to answer the question himself or if he can ask for help (or if he should ask for help). If the user is a student, he can easily recognize if he can use StackOverflow to get help in the future. Is there a way to get the 'grep' function of Google (GSuite) into StackOverflow? If it is not possible, what is the best combination of tools to get the same effect? I am not sure what tags I should use, so 09e8f5149f
