Rapid induction of NF-kappa B activity and expression of specific genes by tumor necrosis factor (TNF)-alpha in human cells. To better understand the role of the transcription factor nuclear factor kappa B (NF-kappa B) in mediating the pleiotropic effects of tumor necrosis factor (TNF)-alpha in human cells, we examined the kinetics of NF-kappa B activity and the expression of the mRNAs encoding the NF-kappa B-regulated proteins, IkappaBalpha, beta-glucuronidase, and beta-actin. In HeLa cells, the induction of NF-kappa B-dependent transcription by TNF-alpha was delayed compared with induction of IkappaBalpha and beta-actin expression. However, NF-kappa B activation was complete within 1 h of stimulation, whereas IkappaBalpha and beta-actin expression was not detectable until 12 h and 8 h, respectively. In contrast, when stimulated with TNF-alpha, primary keratinocytes and Jurkat T cells displayed a transient induction of NF-kappa B activity by 4 h, followed by a more sustained expression. The rate of IkappaBalpha expression in these cells also preceded that of beta-actin expression. Thus, TNF-alpha can differentially regulate NF-kappa B-dependent gene expression in different cell types. In addition, the data demonstrate that human cells express transcripts of the NF-kappa B-inducible proteins, IkappaBalpha, beta-actin, and beta-glucuronidase. Qualcomm beats expectations, but faces tough road ahead The world's largest provider of mobile chips announced that the first half of 2012 ended with a profit, but is facing the very real threat of losing market share due to patent disputes with Apple and Samsung. Qualcomm reported that its second-quarter profit was $981 million, or 37 cents per share, on revenue of $6.41 billion. Wall Street analysts had expected the company to report a profit of 32 cents per share on revenue of $6.4 billion. By those measures, the first half of
