In this Photoshop tutorial I'll show you how to create a square and rectangle texture with Photoshop tutorial. This tutorial could be used as an intro to the appropriate "subsequent" or "advanced" Photoshop tutorials but even if you are not an expert in Photoshop we'll cover the most important essentials so that you can get a good start. You can create this texture by doing the following steps or you can simply copy/paste them in Photoshop. The steps are very easy to follow so let's start with creating our file. Start with a new document in Photoshop. Create a new layer on the layer panel and call it "sky" in the name text box. On the photo icon on the top left you'll see the magic icon. Click it and you'll see the tools panel open. click on the picker and a new window will open. Select the Rectangle tool and draw a rectangle on the canvas. Click on the selection to deselect the area and delete it. Create a new layer on the layer panel and name it "rect". Select all the content except the rectangle layer and copy/paste it to a new document. We need to put the rectangle in the upper-left corner of the image as you can see in the image above. Create a new layer on the layer panel and name it "shape". Duplicate the shape layer and move it to the bottom-right corner of the file. Select "shape" and "move" the shape to the bottom-right corner of the image and click "set origin". Select all the content except the shape layer and paste it back to the same document. I don't know if we can select pasted content in Photoshop so just select everything except the shape layer and copy/paste it to another document. Click on the "transform" icon on the top right and move the content so that the entire rectangle is above the shape layer. Click on the "select" icon and select the shape layer. There's some distortion but not as much as in the above image. The size of the rectangle is one pixel. The photo has some sharpening but we can take care of it after. Select "image" in the shape layer and "image adjustment a681f4349e

Meningeal melanocytoma A meningeal melanocytoma, also known as meningeal pigmented neurilemmoma, is a rare form of pigmented melanocytic tumor of the central nervous system. It is derived from the tumor cell of the leptomeningeal blood vessels. The tumor is often found in patients with neurofibromatosis type 2 (NF2). It is usually a benign tumor. It does not recur after resection. Presentation People who have NF2 are sometimes found to have asymptomatic lesions on their brainstem. These lesions are often hard to visualize, because there is little space between the skull and the brain. These lesions have a predilection for the lower part of the brainstem. Radiographically, these lesions are usually pedunculated, and can cause bony destruction. Epidemiology Meningeal melanocytoma is very rare. It usually presents in children between the ages of 6 and 20. It is typically found in patients with NF2. Pathophysiology Meningeal melanocytoma is an extremely rare tumor of the central nervous system. The tumor cells are derived from the tumor cell of the leptomeningeal blood vessels. Diagnosis Cerebral angiography may be used to visualize the tumor. Differential diagnosis Other types of pigmented meningiomas that may be confused with melanocytomas are pigmented meningioma and pigmented ependymoma. Treatment A surgical biopsy is the preferred treatment for this tumor. In addition, surgical resection is likely to improve symptoms such as headaches or vision loss. Prognosis Since the tumor is low grade, prognosis is favorable. This time I did it as a pinwheel. It takes a bit of time and elbow grease but it turned out pretty good. It was done with an old rusted bow (and the rusted tiller from a mower) and an old aluminum lawn chair. For the paint I used a light to medium coat of royal blue paint to cover
