2018The present invention relates generally to a method for the use of chemical sensors in medical diagnostics. More specifically, the present invention relates to a system and method for the use of chemically sensitive sensors for detecting analytes. As a result of improved medical procedures, more and more people now live long enough to develop chronic diseases such as diabetes and heart disease. In treating such chronic diseases, the level of one or more analytes in the blood is monitored. Such monitoring requires the use of chemical sensors. Chemical sensors are chemical receptors which can detect the presence of small amounts of one or more chemical analytes. As used herein, the term “analyte” refers to a chemical compound for which a chemical sensor is made. Analytes can be synthesized and used as the receptor. However, since the chemical sensors are often used for detection of small amounts of natural bodily fluids, the sensor components are normally small organic molecules which exhibit a large change in their physical properties when an analyte is bound to the sensor. There are two basic types of chemical sensors, electrochemical sensors and optical sensors.

Electrochemical sensors use electrochemical techniques to measure the analyte, while optical sensors use optical techniques to measure the analyte. In either case, the analyte in the blood is typically converted to a compound which is bound to the sensor material. The chemistry of the reaction between the analyte and the sensor material is normally specific to the analyte. Thus, the signal generated by the sensor is a direct function of the analyte concentration. A large number of chemical sensors have been developed for measuring glucose concentrations in the blood. Glucose sensors have been produced by many different methods. Sensors have been prepared using a variety of materials including semiconductors, metals, and polymers. One of the common materials used in the preparation of glucose sensors is a polymeric membrane. The use of polymeric membranes for the fabrication of glucose sensors has been reviewed in the technical literature. U.S. Pat. No. 5,120,420 issued on Jun. 9, 1992 to Philip B. Jordan, et al., discloses a method and apparatus for determining the concentration of glucose in a sample of biological fluid, such as blood, by an electrochemical procedure.

The procedure involves positioning a thin film electrode which contains a mixture of
