Saint-Pancras Cemetery Saint-Pancras Cemetery, officially known as Cemetery of the Holy Trinity Saint-Pancras, is a cemetery in the 5th arrondissement of Paris, founded in 1880. It is located at 16 rue des Rosiers, in the shadow of the Bastille at the edge of the 18th Arrondissement. The burials took place in the cemetery at the end of the 19th century and early 20th century. Among the illustrious people buried here was Édouard Manet, whose name he defaced with his own name, "Édouard Manet-Plein-Sans-Tête" (pardon, without a head). The burial location of some other dead celebrities, such as Louis Pasteur, is marked with plaques.

History The cemetery is located on the site of a former convent of the Holy Trinity. The different streets to the cemetery, now named after a saint, were named after the different parishes in the city. In the 18th century, the area around the convent was generally populated with poor; the convent was erected in 1771, near the original Bicêtre Hospital, which is where most of the poor inmates stayed. In 1880, the cemetery was inaugurated, dividing the area previously used for burial from the cemetery proper. Initially, the grave area had no individual memorials, but individual placques - tables, in which flowers or candles were placed. In addition, there was a small enclosed garden. The cemetery later received the status of a burial place for the French state - the state could present as many people as it wanted to be buried here. By the end of the 19th century, the cemetery became a resting place for famous people: Renoir, Bazaine, Manet, Seurat, Lautrec, Durand-Ruel, Steinlen, Bazille, Guillaumin, Baudouin de Lévis and many others.

Notable interments Gaspard-Auguste Aurenche, painter Eugene-Emmanuel Bacon, sculptor Édouard Manet, painter Émile Blanche, painter Émile Boyer, photographer See also List of cemeteries in
