By default, Photoshop opens to an image on the Clipboard. After you manipulate an image, if you need to use it again, you may copy it to the Clipboard by pressing Ctrl+C (⌘-C). You can paste an image on the Clipboard by pressing Ctrl+V (⌘-V). You can use this method to save a manipulated image and turn it back into a new image. It's also the method you should use to create a `template` — a saved version of the file you use as a base. Here are the steps to create a new file and save an image as a template, which will be used again and again: 1. Save the file to your hard drive with a meaningful name. In the New dialog box, the Make New Documents Available check box enables you to save the file as a template.
